

Prof. Scott Madry

International Space University

Prof. Madry is a Professor of Satellite Applications at the International Space University and runs the ISU Southern Hemisphere Summer Space Program in Adelaide Australia. He is a Research Associate Professor of Archaeology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and President of Informatics International, Inc.

His education includes: Ph.D. 1986 – University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (UNC-CH), Department of Anthropology. Dissertation Title: “Regional Spatial Modeling in Archaeology: A Test Case From The Upper Neuse River Basin, North Carolina.” Advisor: Professor Carole Crumley. M.A. 1983 – University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Department of Anthropology. Thesis Title: “A Multi-Scalar Application of Remote Sensing in a Temperate Regional Archaeological Survey.” Advisor: Professor Carole Crumley. B.A. 1978 – University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Anthropology Major, Specialization in Photogrammetry and Computer Applications in Archaeology.